

LSE-TUFTS

SEMINAR IN CONTEMPORARY INTERNATIONAL HISTORY

Program 2024-2025

A joint interdisciplinary seminar between the LSE International History Department, LSE International Relations Department, and The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Seminars take place from 4:00pm-5:30pm in London, 11-12:30pm in Boston, and on Zoom.

Organisers:

Dr. Elizabeth O'Brien Ingleson (LSE)

Dr. Elisabeth Leake (Tufts)

Dr. Martin Bayly (LSE)

For Zoom and room locations, email: e.ingleson@lse.ac.uk

October 16, 2024

Margot Tudor (City University, London) Protesting peacekeeping: dissent and women activists across UN missions during mid-century decolonisation. Commentary: Jasmine Gani (London School of Economics)

October 30, 2024

Sarah Snyder (American University, Washington) A Global Reordering of Overseas Americans During the Cold War. Commentary: David Milne (University of East Anglia)

November 20, 2024

Aimee Genell, (Boston University) Exporting Egypt to the Gulf: Autonomy in the Ottoman Empire, 1908-1914. Commentary: Katerina Dalacoura (London School of Economics)

December 4, 2024

Brian Spivey (University of California, Irvine) An Environmental Third Way: The People's Republic of China at the 1972 UN Conference of the Human Environment. Commentary: Dario Fazzi (Leiden University)

January 29, 2025

Aden Knapp (Yale University) The Rose Mary Doctrine: Hot Commodities, Cold Nationalizations, and the Litigation of Decolonization, 1950s–1980s. Commentary: Christopher Dietrich (Fordham University)

February 12, 2025

Anna Calori (University of Glasgow) Cultivating Development. Non-aligned agro-industrial partnerships in Zambia and Yugoslavia. Commentary: Rachel Applebaum (Tufts University)

March 12, 2025

Ahmad Umar (Aberystwyth University) Rethinking 'Revolt against the West': Pan-Asianism and International Order, 1880-1945. Commentary: Shruti Balaji (London School of Economics)

March 26, 2025

Or Rosenboim (University of Bologna) Economies of Faith: The international thought of Barbara Ward. Commentary: Sinja Graf (London School of Economics)

